PROFILE

Michael focuses his practice on high-stakes international disputes, advising private parties and sovereign states in various sectors, including energy, mining, banking and finance, retail, and internet governance.

Clients describe Michael as “very strategic and resourceful.” He is adept at handling their most sensitive issues, including allegations of corruption. For example, he has represented Hungarian multinational energy company MOL in its long-running series of disputes against the Republic of Croatia, securing substantial awards rejecting Croatia’s allegations of bribery and upholding the validity of MOL’s contracts. Additionally he served as counsel for the special litigation committee of a Fortune 100 electric utility where he investigated high-profile bribery allegations in connection with a shareholder derivative lawsuit.

Michael also has extensive experience advising clients in connection with post-award litigation. He has represented both claimants and respondents in actions to recognize, enforce, and set aside arbitral awards valued at nearly a billion dollars in U.S. courts and abroad.

Prior to joining BSF, Michael was a member of the international arbitration practice of a leading international law firm in New York.

EXPERIENCE

Michael’s experience includes:

- Representing a multinational energy company in parallel bet-the-company investor-state arbitrations under UNCITRAL and ICSID rules, culminating in awards worth over $250 million
